

Frank Lloyd Wright

St. Louis Park, downtown Minneapolis.

Exterior

The house itself is 2,647 square feet and full of vaulted ceilings and huge floor-to-ceiling windows. The floors throughout the entire house are done in Frank Lloyd Wright's signature hue—Cherokee Red.

Foyer

Wright started the project in 1958, but construction was completed after his death in 1960. He designed almost all of the furniture and fixtures in the house.

Kitchen

The Minnesota home has three bedrooms, two bathrooms and is part of 3.77 “extremely private acres at the end of a quiet cul de sac” in St. Louis Park, just a few miles from downtown Minneapolis.

Basement

The house also has a finished basement, which is rare in a Frank Lloyd Wright home.

Fireplace

The house has many of the classic FLW features, including an enormous great room with a stunning fireplace.

Furnishings

It also has dining chairs, lamps, and cabinet pulls created from original designs by the architect.

Views

And just look at these stunning views—you could hardly find a more gorgeous property, no matter what season it is.

Study

The group, which included Fallingwater, Taliesin West, and Unity Temple, was slated for later consideration, which means the properties will most likely be resubmitted this year (2018).

Translation: if you bid your time (and with a little luck), the value of this property could skyrocket ($1.295 million)!
